Pardee presents Shooting Star Awards

(Hendersonville, N.C.) Pardee Hospital presented Shooting Star awards in November to Terri Dyer, 3 West, and Jackie Poston, Patient Financial Services.

The Shooting Star Award recognizes Pardee associates who consistently go above and beyond in their jobs and serve as role models to their fellow associates. Winners are nominated by their co-workers to receive the award.

Dyer's co-workers say that she has great pride and a sense of ownership in Pardee. She puts her action where her heart is, both working on the unit and volunteering for Pardee in the community. They say she is always first in line with good, practical ideas on how processes work and how they can be improved. She is a skilled unit secretary with a keen knowledge of the how things used to be, how they are now, the many improvements we've made, who to connect with when a resource is needed, and where to find just what you're looking for when you can't find it. She is known for focusing on patients by quickly addressing their concerns.

Poston's co-workers say her attitude towards work and her outlook of life in general is infused with practicality. She always sees the good in everyone and is uplifting. When someone is in need, she is always the first to assist. Her co-workers say
